

Golf Club Head With Springy Striking Area

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A head of a golf club is described which can drive a golf ball a great distance. The club head has a hollow body shell with a front flat frame. There mounted onto the flat frame either a striking plate and/or strips and/or strings in a stretched condition with an appropriate tightness of different designs to give a springy highest striking force upon hitting against a golf ball.